

Zombie Rule Book

1) No Eating or Attacking Bystanders

I know, I know. You are a zombie right? Attacking innocents is your thing. Well, just for today, we must be on our best undead behaviors. For the business around, you can bet there will be people who want to watch. Give 'um your best groan and stare but keep your limbs (if you have more than two) to yourself.

Remember zombies, too, can be arrested.

2) Eyes (if you've still got both) on the Brains

Even though there are endless possibilities for zombie on the rampage, we have a mission. We have a purpose. We also have only a set area that we were graced with so, please, stay on the set routes.

3) Even for the Undead, Cars Kill

Knowing that most of your brain has turned to mush and you can't even perform basic motor skills, like jumping, some part of your brain must be alive enough to obey traffic signs. While there will be few streets to cross, the main road is often busy and even the most brazen zombie doesn't stand a chance against the frequent semis. So, for the sake of the hoard, look both ways before you crawl across the street.

4) The Weapon of Choice is . . . Nerf . .

This one goes out to our apocalypse resistors. If you are going to carry your protection against the undead, it must CLEARLY be fake. I'm talking bright colors and flashing lights fake.

STB 1st Annual Zombie Crawl

5) Please Do Not Leak on the Road or Bystanders

Simply stating this, we don't want a mess on the streets or other people. While it might be fun to ooze and gush blood, please just keep it on your costume or yourself.

5) Walk like an Egyptian

(who has been dead for several thousand years)

You're a zombie. You're decaying while you are on the search for brains. All motor skills have been significantly decreased by your brain matter turning to goo inside your skull. You want to rip the living apart piece by piece but you have lost the ability to speak. Let it out. Limp, crawl and drag that damaged leg. That is your motivation. Don't think like a zombie. BE THE ZOMBIE! You never know when the next time you will get to terrorize the living so give it all you've got!

Please remember to stay in character!

6) Use that Undead Gray Matter

We all want to enjoy this and if you noticed this is the 1st Annual Zombie Crawl. That means we are looking forwards creating nightmares for many years to come. To do that, we need to show the community that we can cause havoc, but fun and organized havoc that doesn't involve the authorities. This event will no doubt include numerous photo opportunities as well as attract a very wide group of ages. With that in mind, basic common sense like no decaying explicit parts or profanity will be allowed. Also, any intoxicated undead will not be allowed as alcohol is strictly prohibited on the property. Other than that, use what is left of that undead brain and make this an enjoyable time we can all savor for years to come!

STB 1st Annual Zombie Crawl

SOME ADDITIONAL TIPS

Fake blood can look really great and can make the walk a lot of fun. However, being covered in sticky goo if you get hot just isn't much fun. So please, don't apply fake blood to the point where you are dripping it all over other people and the sidewalk.

It is well known that zombies retain memories of their time as people. This means they are well aware of traffic laws, and other general rules of the world. In the movies they ignore these rules, in our Zombie Walk they follow them.

Just being dressed as a zombie and wandering about moaning is chaos and fun enough. If there is damage to stores, arrests, assaults, or a big mess made, then future Zombie Walks may be in jeopardy.

Just because you're undead doesn't mean you can't die.

If you see someone else breaking a rule or about to do something that will get them assaulted or arrested, politely remind them of the rules and save them from themselves. A zombie mob knows how to work as a team...its that "hive" mentality.

PARTICIPATE AT YOUR OWN RISK

Besides setting a place and a date for this public event, and inviting you to dress up like zombies and wander around in public...we have no responsibility for who shows up, how they act, or the other 1,000,000 things that could go wrong each-and-every-time you go out in public. Like any other stroll down a sidewalk, things can happen. This is a completely open and voluntary event, and we cannot be held responsible if you get hurt, arrested, or otherwise inconvenienced. Whatever care you take when you normally go out in public, you should also take the day of the Zombie Walk.

Come for the History, Stay for the Brrraaiinnnssss

